

The Motor Coach for 1975.

The FMC. Standing apart in a world of motor home look-alikes, built-the-sames.

A totally-engineered approach to elegant on-and-off road travel and liveability. A unifying of performance and luxury. All of the first order.

One glance is all that's needed to tell you how different the FMC is. Long, and low, standing wide. The sleek, smooth, moving lines of its all-fiberglass body are unbroken by unsightly (and air-resisting) roof-mounted appliances. And tinted safety glass all around, everywhere you look, to bring the sights outside in.

A driver's door, for convenience and safety. And a mid-vehicle passenger's door, too.

At the rear, a powerful engine, mounted behind the driving wheels. Greater traction, more efficient operation. No noise, heat, vibration, or engine hump in the driver's area. And completely serviceable from outside the coach.

Unseen is the custom-built, fully-integrated body and chassis unit. A sheath of steel beam lower framing and aluminum upper cage construction. Packed with sound absorbing, insulating polyurethane foam.

Likewise hidden from view, the independent suspension at all four wheels, for a smoother ride. Power brakes, for a safer ride. And power steering, for an easier ride.

A single step up and you're inside the FMC. Luxury speaks back softly from every inch. Plush carpeting underfoot. Walls in easy-care, vinyl clad aluminum. Cabinetry in rich woodgrain. Elegant seating fabrics and coordinating woven window shades. A harmony of color, pleasantly understated.

Wander through the ample, sensibly-arranged salon, bath, dining, and entertaining areas—as practical as they are luxurious. Complete living for six.

A driver's compartment engineered for comfort and control. Take command with a full complement of automotive and household instruments, including unique optical display of vehicle functions and systems.

All the niceties of life—like stereo, color TV hook-up and air-conditioning. And all the necessities of life, too. All fully provided for.
